Getting the 'right fit' between supervisee and supervisor is as important as finding the right fit between therapist and client. As with therapy, the relationship is paramount and requires our ongoing and careful attention.

Our approach to supervision will undoubtedly be influenced by our unique personality and preferred modality. In attending to the relationship, we must also consider the needs and developmental level of the supervisee, making sure that the relationship continues to support the supervisee as they develop and grow in their role as a therapist.

Workshop Overview:

Drawing from the work of leaders in the field of Supervision, this workshop will explore aspects of the supervisory relationship, including the following:

- Functions of supervision
- Developmental levels of supervisees
- Developmental levels of supervisors
- What is a healthy fit?
- Boundaries
- Self disclosure
- Transference and Counter transference
- Fostering growth (of the therapist and of the relationship)

Your presenters: Jo Ablett and Cheryl Taylor have a solid foundation of supervisory training and experience gained over more than a decade of practice as Supervisors. They both hold a Masters Degree in Counselling, have completed a Certificate IV and a Graduate Diploma in Counselling Supervision and are registered Supervisors with ACA, AAOs, ACSA and PACFA. They are committed to supporting other Counsellors and Therapists in their journeys as Supervisors and to providing a safe space for Supervisors, Team Leaders, and those in supervisory roles, to reflect on and deepen their work.
